

a poetry reading and open mic presented by The Worcester County Poetry Association at Tower Hill Botanical Garden

In Just- / spring

April 22, 2018, 2:00

Tower Hill Botanical Garden
11 French Drive
Boylston, MA 01505

To borrow a few words from E.E. Cummings, please join us “when the world is mud- / luscious” and “puddle-wonderful” to share your original poetry or your favorite spring-themed poems by other writers.

Featured Poets

Heather Treseler’s poems and essays appear in Boston Review, Iowa Review, and Missouri Review, among other journals and books. In 2016, she received the Worcester County Poetry Association’s Frank O’Hara Prize. She is an associate professor at Worcester State University and a Visiting Research Associate at the Brandeis University Women’s Studies Research Center.

Henry Walters studied Latin and Greek at Harvard College, beekeeping in Sicily, and falconry in Ireland. He has worked as a teacher, a naturalist, a practicing falconer, and a steward of a wildlife sanctuary. His poems, translations, and essays have appeared in a range of publications, from The Old Farmer’s Almanac to The American Guide to Hawk Migration Studies, and he is the recipient of Better Magazine’s 2013 prize for poetry. His first poetry collection is Field Guide A Tempo (Hobblebush Books).

Hosted by Diane Mulligan, managing editor of The Worcester Review and the author of three novels, most recently What She Inherits, which was named an honorable mention in Writer’s Digest’s 25th Annual Self-Published Book Awards. She teaches English at Saint John’s High School in Shrewsbury, MA.